Report on "Online Workshop and Coursework on Research Methodology for Quantitative Research in Social Science," organized by Vidyalankar School of Information Technology

The workshop took place from May 3, 2021, to May 15, 2021, and I had the privilege of attending this enlightening and educational event.

The content and curriculum of the workshop were well-structured, comprehensive, and highly relevant to the field of quantitative research in social science. The topics covered a wide range of research methodologies, statistical tools, and practical applications. The materials were not only informative but also engaging, making it easy to grasp complex concepts.

The instructors and facilitators were exceptionally knowledgeable and experienced in the subject matter. Their expertise was evident in the way they delivered the course content and provided clear explanations. Their approachability and willingness to address questions and provide additional insights greatly enriched the learning experience.

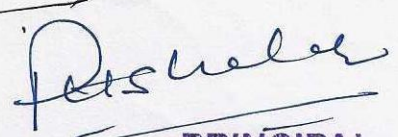

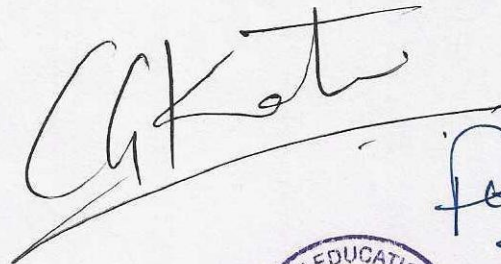

One of the workshop's strengths was the emphasis on interactive learning. The use of online discussion forums, group activities, and live Q&A sessions fostered an engaging and collaborative learning environment. This approach not only deepened my understanding of the topics but also facilitated valuable interactions with fellow participants, leading to networking opportunities.

The workshop encouraged hands-on learning and practical application of the concepts taught. Participants were given opportunities to work on real-world research problems, applying the techniques and methodologies learned during the coursework. This practical experience was invaluable in reinforcing theoretical knowledge.

The support provided by Vidyalankar School of Information Technology was commendable. Technical issues were promptly addressed, and course materials, readings, and additional resources were readily accessible. The wealth of resources offered contributed to self-study and further exploration of the subject.

The workshop's certification upon completion added significant value to my academic and professional profile. In conclusion, my participation in the workshop has been a rewarding and enriching experience.
